

CITY INTELLIGENCE. OVER THE RIVER.

The Great Bridge over the Delaware—The Hearings for the Structure About to Commence—The Bridge Itself and How It Will Be Built.

There is a prospect at last that a bridge over the Delaware, so long regarded as a myth, will be built. A bill concerning its erection has passed both branches of Congress and been approved by the President, and the assent of the States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey has been granted.

The charter empowers the abovesaid gentlemen and their associates to erect a bridge, with diverging roadways and double draws, over and across the Delaware river, between the city of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, and the city of Camden, in the State of New Jersey, at any time within six years after the passage of this act.

The bridge will be a "suspension" structure, supported by immense cables resting upon strong towers. Its lowest elevation at the Philadelphia side will be sixty feet at the highest part of the curve it will reach one hundred and thirty feet at the draws.

The required amount of stock has been taken by responsible parties, and everything is in readiness for a beginning. The proposed structure will be erected under the superintendence of Mr. Thomas S. Speakman, of Camden, N. J., upon a peculiar plan invented and patented by him.

It is further required that the consent of the two States shall first be obtained, and that the plans and specifications shall receive the approval of the Secretary of War.

FARO. A Man in a Sporting House—A Noted Fencer Now Shot—He Refuses to Make any Disclosures.

The well-known drinking and sporting den at the S. E. corner of Eleventh and Sanson streets was last night made the scene of a bloody encounter which will end in the death of one of the participants.

Their friends, however, soon separated them, and the matter was quieted. Later in the evening, about 9 o'clock, the two again met at the drinking and sporting den, and began quarrelling again. It is not known at present who struck the first blow, but it is evident that Donnelly received a severe cut on the head.

After the quarrel had progressed a few minutes, Donnelly drew a revolver, and taking down a Williams, fired two shots, one of which struck him in the groin. He fell upon his knees, and while in that position, the second shot was fired. The ball penetrated the left breast near the nipple and passed obliquely through the lung and lodged in the back.

While this was going on a friend of the party who had just entered, and seeing the commotion, asked if "this thing could not be stopped?" Smith would not enter the place, but waited outside. Soon Donnelly emerged from the saloon, accompanied by the stranger, and both started up Sanson street. Donnelly's hands were covered with blood, and he held in one of them the revolver which did the deed.

Meantime Williams had been conveyed to the Pennsylvania Hospital. The physician in charge immediately probed the wounds, and expressed his opinion that the man would not survive. Williams and Special Officers Roberts and Burns having arrived, Williams was questioned as to the occurrence, but he refused to make any statement.

Subsequently Alderman Morrow was sent for to take his ante-mortem statement. On going to the bedside of Williams and telling him the nature of his errand, Williams said, "I have no charge to make against any one; if you are here, alderman, to ask me who done the shooting, I will not tell you; I forgive the man who shot me, and I hope he may prosper and live a thousand years; to punish him would do me no good, and if I should die it would only be inflicting on him a punishment which he may not be deserving; he may have been right in the matter and I may have been wrong; any way, I forgive him, and I will not say anything that would injure him."

He said he lived in Pittsburg, and had but a single request to make, and that was that his body be sent to his father, James Williams, who lives at No. 35 Eighteenth street, in that city.

Later in the night he seemed to realize his situation, and turning to some of his friends said, "Boys, I would like to live to be an old man, but I guess I'll have to go." He then asked that a Catholic priest be sent for, and soon one made his appearance and administered to him the sacrament.
